Mr. Balfour, replying to the opposition leaders, pointed out that England's colonies and dependencies were contiguous to nies and dependencies were contiguous to great powers which might be at war with her, and that her allies might reasonably expect her assistance. The chief object of the government, he said, was not to increase the number of troops, but to make that number effective. The only actual increase was the 19,000 garrison veterans and the 25,000 yeomanry, an increase so small as to afford no justification for the charges brought against the government.

THE WORLD'S COMMERCE

Statistics for Twenty of the Principal

A picture of the world's commerce in 1900 is presented in some figures just published by the treasury bureau of statistics as a part of the monthly summary of commerce and finance. It shows the imports and exports of twenty of the principal countries of the world, down to the latest attainable date, in many cases including the final month of the year 1900. The figures in most cases are for that portion of the fiscal year which had expired at the latest date for which the figures can be the corresponding months of the preceding fiscal year, showing the increase or de-

The figures are especially interesting in the opportunity which they offer to com-pare the present condition of the commerce of the various countries with that of one year ago, and to compare the growth of our own commerce with that of other countries. In the latter opportunity the figures are particularly gratifying. They show that the exports of the United States in the seven months ending with January, 1901, increased just $100,000,000 over the corresponding months of the preceding fis-cal year, while those of the united kingdom in the same months increased just $50,000,000 over the corresponding months of the preceding year. Germany's increase in exports for the twelve months ending with December is $49,000,000 over the year 1809, while France shows a decrease of $14,000,000 in 1900, as compared with the year 1809; Argentina, during her nine months ending with September, 1900,

Exports from-ports over the same months of the preceding year; Austria-Hungary, in the calendar year 1900, shows an increase of $10,000,000 over 1899; Belgium shows a decrease of $12,000,000 in the calendar year 1900, compared with 1899; Canada, for the five months ending with November, shows an increase of $12,000,000; Mexico, in the four months ending with October, an increase of $4,500,000; Russia, in the ten months ending with October, an increase of $38,000,000; British India, in the seven months ending with October, a decrease of $15,000,000; Italy, in the eleven months ending with November, a decrease of $16, 000,000, and Spain, in the eleven months ending with November, 1900, a decrease of Turning to the import side the figures also show a satisfactory condition with reference to the United States, as compared with that of the other countries preented. In the seven months ending with January, 1901, the imports into the United States were $28,000,000 less than those of the same months of the preceding fiscal year, while those of the united kingdom in that time showed an increase of $27,000,000 Austria-Hungary shows in the full year 1900 an increase in imports of $15,000,000; Belgium, for the same period, a decrease of $10,000,000; France, in the full year 1900 a decrease of $22,000,000; Germany, in the same period, an increase of $18,000,000; Italy, in the eleven months ending with November, an increase of $10,000,000; Mexico, in the four months ending with October, an increase of $2,000,000 over the corresponding months of the preceding year. and Spain, in the eleven months ending with November, a decrease of $5,000,000. as compared with the same months of 1899. For the seven months ending with July 1900, the Philippine Islands show an increase in imports of over $2,000,000, and in exports of nearly $6,000,000 The tables of the bureau of statistics

STRANGE SEA LIFE. Inormous Worm-Like Creatures That Explode After Their Capture. From the Scattle Post-Intelligencer.

What is believed, to be a hitherto unknown species of the spoonworm has been pumped up from the depths of Elliott bay by the dredger in operation near the Centennial mill. Specimens which have been submitted to Prof., Trevor Kincaid of the university are pronounced by him to be different from any species previously found in Puget Sound, but somewhat similar to an Alaskan form of sea life.

The animal found in the bay is of nondescript appearance. It resembles an oblong transparent rubber bag filled with water and varies from three to five inches in length. It is about as thick, generally, as a man's thumb. At each end are several circles of sharp bristles, colored like brass and seemingly hard. These are believed to be its defensive weapons. The bristles at one end are stronger and more numerous than at the other. Other species have the bristles only at one end.

These peculiar animals were first brought to the surface about two weeks ago by the dredger of the Seattle and Lake Washington Waterway Company. They were sucked up by the pumps from a depth of from thirty to thirty-five feet and carried through the discharge pipes to the point where the filling is made. There they crew, whose curiosity was aroused by the appearance of the worms. A number were collected and given to the officers of the dredger stated yesterday that the species live on rocks, and every time they have been pumped up so far they have been ac-companied by pieces of stone and coal, which had been dumped into the bay from ships discharging their ballast. "We find none for several days," he said,

"and then they come in a bunch. They appear to be able to travel on any side and wriggle along like a common earthworm. As far as I can learn it is not exactly known whether they live upon the surface of the seabottom or beneath it. We always find them submerged and I believe they w long. They live on smaller worms and m do not have much vitality, although they cut some queer antics when out of the water."

Foreman Jones, who oversees the work at the mouth of the discharge pipe, says the worms are called sea cucumbers and that they are very common. He declares that he has often found some as long as twenty inches close to the beach when the end, he says, they have large suckers, by means of which they capture smaller forms of life. It is believed by others that Mr. Jones has confounded the species with TO PREVENT PNEUMONIA AND GRIP some other.

A specimen of the worm sent to the Post

tion to Prof. Kincaid of the zoological chair at the State University. The specimen had been kept over night in an empty cigar box and when examined was found to have exploded, only a fragment of dried skin remaining. Prof. Kincaid pronounced it a species of echiuru, one of the spoon worms, or sipunclodea. The latter, he said, were allied to the earthworm. There is a large difference between them, however, as the sea species does not have his body divided into compartments. Prof. Kincaid states that the specimen submitted to him fer examination is unlike any species so far recorded from Puget Sound. They resem-

When Benjamin Franklin died, in 1790, he left a small sum of money which was not to be used until the twentieth century. His gift is at last available, and the sum a goodly one of $375,000, having been invested at compound interest. The trustees of the Franklin fund have decided to use the money for the erection of a Franklin institute in Franklin Square, Boston. It will be on the plan of the among other relatives. To his three daughters an Italian who recently died in New York left $300 a year each if they remained single, and $2,500 s year if they married.

A late member of parliament, London, England, left by will to his two daughters f144,000, with the provision that the money is only to be payable if they attain the age of thirty-five years without marrying either a citizen of the United States or a Hebrew.

To provide for any possible widows who might try to contest his will, a Californian left $50 each. In this way one-hundredth part of his fortune of $50,000 is disposed
